The following information is from [REDACTED] Free World Branch and is in response to the queries raised [REDACTED] in reference (a).

25X1

1. The source of the information on the proposed deployment of sites contained in paragraph 2 of reference (b) is an Army Engineer concerned with construction of missile sites.

2. a. See footnote 2 on page 1. "A squadron is equivalent to a firing or technical battalion or site in SAM terminology."

b. Reference to paragraph 2 (lines 2 to 5 on page 3). As indicated in the footnote to the term squadron (see a. above), the term site is equivalent to either a firing battalion or a technical battalion.
Thus each airfield (Malang and Madiun) will receive two firing battalions and a support battalion, or three sites, for an over-all total of six sites.

3. Since July 1963, no further information was received here

[REDACTED] would be grateful for further details on the following points from referenced report:

1. Information/sources regarding proposed deployment of sites to defend airbases at Malang and Madiun mentioned in para. 2.

2. Information indicating what unit mans one SA-2 site.
Term "squadron" has been used. Does this mean one site? In para. 2 it is stated that two firing battalions man six sites.
Would this imply three squadrons to a battalion?
